  – Four variations

• Four evolutionary states

• Environmental conditionings

• Past life dynamics (Pluto, SN, SN rulers)

• Evolutionary Intent (PPP, NN, NN rulers)
Five Primary Relationship Types

- Co-dependent
- Counselor/Counselee
- Teacher/Student
- Sado/masochistic
- Self-sufficient

Five primary relationship types may co-mingle.
Co-dependent Relationships

• Most common relationship type.
  – Patriarchal conditionings over 8,000 years.

• Each person projects needs onto other person.
  – Expects other to always meet those needs.

• Mutual projection – each person “out-pictures” inner reality onto other.
  – Neither sees actual reality of the other.

• Basis of conditional love – “I will love you if....”

• Each person loses sight of own identity.
Co-dependent Relationships

• Normal healthy relationship boundaries are non-existent.
  – Each person makes other a “defacto god/goddess” or reason for living.

• Worst case scenario: cannot live without the other:
  – Do whatever necessary to maintain relationship.

• Evolutionary necessity may remove one partner:
  – Death, one leaves or is removed.
  – One left may not have ability to carry on – suicide.
Counselor/Counselee Relationships

• One person feels that another person has needed psychological information/knowledge.

• Person with info seems more mature.
  – Insights, wisdom attractive.

• Mature person is just as insecure underneath.
  – Fears of - loss, abandonment, betrayal, violation of trust, persecution - if too much revealed.
  – Just as needy as those they attract.
  – May be more needy than those aware of needs.
Counselor/Counselee Relationships

• Psychological compensations of attracting one who appears more needy allows for control in the relationship.
  – Emotional/psychological security through control.
  – Security because someone “needs me.”

• Counselor keys in on weakest psychological and emotional links in other and appears helpful.
Counselor/Counsellee Relationships

• If/when other begins to heal, counselor feels threatened and insecure.
  – Covert manipulations to maintain control.
  – Can become vindictive and abusive.
  – Counselor’s fears are coming true.
Counselor/Counselee Relationships

- Counselee gives up power to one who appears to have something they need.
- Maintain relationship only for duration of needs that created the relationship.
  - Once needs satisfied, terminate relationship.
  - Meeting one’s own needs.
  - Current counselor cannot meet new needs.
- Moves on to new counselor type who symbolizes ability to meet new needs.
Counselor/Counselee Relationships

• Karma of manipulation can exist for both counselor and counselee in relationship.
  – Both are dependent upon roles for security.
• Inherent imbalance:
  – Counselor does most of giving, needs not met.
  – Counselee does most of receiving.
• Counselor unconsciously sets up fears to be exposed to become honest with self.
  – Counselor may then become counselee in a relationship.
Teacher/Student Relationships

• Variation of counselor/counselee type.
  – Many of same dynamics present.
• Core difference: not psychological.
• More to do with teachings of life.
  – Less evolved: nuts and bolts of life.
  – More evolved: spiritual teachings.
• Relationship inequality still exists with emotional investment for security reasons.
Teacher/Student Relationships

• Manipulation in order to sustain roles likely.
• Both student and teacher need to realize they are using each other for security needs.
  – Teacher may also be left.
  – Teacher may also unconsciously set up fears.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

• Most difficult relationship type.
  – So many forms/expressions most people do not recognize it.
  – Permeates almost all relationships types, ie LBGT.
  – Extremes of inferiority/superiority.

• Reflection of distortions from “garden of eden” myth with rise of patriarchy.
  – Guilt permeates as flesh is believed to be antagonistic to spirit.
  – Suffering is a prerequisite to growth.
  – Guilt leads to atonement or anger.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Masochistic Pathology – atonement linked to guilt - 3 subconscious messages:

• I deserve pain, suffering, crisis, punishment, humility, etc and I do not know why.
  – Includes denial/avoidance in suppression of truth.
  – There must be something wrong with me.

• For my needs to be met, I must suffer first.

• I am essentially worthless, while mentally knowing better.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Masochistic Pathology – atonement linked to guilt:

• Circumstantial reality defined by personal crucifixion.
  – Compulsively sacrificing oneself over and over.
  – If I just give/love/do a little more.....
Sadomasochistic Relationships

• Usually very narcissistic.
  – No real capacity to acknowledge actual needs or identity of masochistic partner.

• So insecure they create “idea” of who masochist should be and expect partner to be that.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Masochistic attracts two types of partners.

Emotional wounded-bird type:

• Masochist left feeling misunderstood and invalidated no matter how many confrontations or pleas for recognition.

• Masochist does almost all the giving, putting out “crises” created by wounded bird partners.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Masochistic attracts two types of partners.

Silver-tongued devil type:
• Knows how to present self in order to “hook” m.
  – How to act, what to say.
• Then, in relationship, actual emotional and psychological reality of sadist partner revealed.
  – Nothing to do with how they presented themselves.
• Masochist disillusioned and another crisis happens.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Masochistic attracts two types of partners.

• Sadist “adopts” concern and sincerity and promises to change.
  – Re-secures relationship.
  – Reverts to true sadistic nature.

• Masochist can attract “wounded bird” and “silver tongue devil” in same person.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

- Masochist is defined by a natural innocence that creates naiveté and gullibility.
- Sees the “spirit of potential” in an individual.
  - Expects them to be the potential.
  - Expects them to actualize what their spirit reflects.
  - Rarely, if ever, does partner do either.
- Disillusionment sets in, and another crisis is at hand.
- Masochists live for the need to be needed.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Sadistic Pathology – anger linked to guilt - 3 subconscious messages:

• I have been made to feel guilty and I am angry because of it.
  – I want to hurt others, make them feel as guilty as I do.
  – I will hurt others first before I get hurt.

• I want to make others atone for their sins.
  – I want to humiliate others so that I am humiliated.

• I punish myself by punishing others for their sins.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Sadistic Pathology – anger linked to guilt:

• Circumstantial reality defined by power over...
  – Dominance/submission, master/slave.
  – Superior/inferior.

• “Castration complex” in both men & women:
  – Fear opposite gender will disempower, destroy.
  – Sadist hurts first to “get even.”
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Sadistic Pathology – anger linked to guilt:

• Underlying feeling that someone is out to get them, hurt them, victimize them.
  – Masochist feels they deserve the victimization.
  – Sadist feels anger at victimization.

• Sadist uses anger to punish others for underlying guilt in their own psyche.

• Sadistic and masochistic pathology can co-exist in same person.
  – Passive/aggressive in classical psychology.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Sadomasochistic relationship type has wide range of behavioral applications.

- Overt: S&M sexual distortions with belts, chains, etc.
  - Pain, release from pain = suffering, freedom.
  - Libertinage philosophy, Marquis de Sade = in order to liberate, one must suffer.

- Overt: Battered wife syndrome, abused child.
- Covert: Man and woman do same job, man paid more.
I brought you to the office today, honey, to show you what you could look forward to...

...if you were a man.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Sadomasochistic relationship type turns the laws of nature upside down.

• Directly emanates from religious distortions via “garden of eden” myth, Judaism, Christian, Islam.

• Flesh is antagonistic to spirit.

• Implied guilt of flesh/senses:
  – Must be suppressed and denied.

• Both signs can be sadistic and masochistic.
  – Includes signs, 6th & 12th houses, rulers (Mercury and Neptune).

• Stems from religious doctrines that God is perfect.

• Humans, especially women, can never be perfect enough, hence guilt linked with atonement and anger.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Sadomasochistic archetype correlates with signs of Virgo and Pisces.

• Pisces Age ushered in by Jesus of Nazareth.

• Life of Jesus:
  – Suffering for our sins
  – Sacrificing his life to absorb our collective karma
  – Not perfect enough – “Father, take this cup from me.”

• Implies if one is perfect enough, all will go okay.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

Sadomasochistic archetype will exist until religious doctrines of a “perfect god” change.

• If god is origin of everything:
  – Wherein lies origin of imperfection?
  – Wherein lies origin of evolution?
  – Wherein lies origin of flesh, senses and sexuality?
  – Wherein lies origin of guilt and its atonement/anger?

Nature shows us God/Goddess is an evolving force.
Sadomasochistic Relationships

God/Goddess as an evolving force shows us:

• God/Goddess is seeking to perfect itself.
  – Love and compassion can replace guilt and its atonement/anger complex.

• Human-made laws distort natural laws.

Aquarian Age is opportunity to embrace natural laws.

Self-sufficient Relationships

Each person still has needs, everyone has needs in a relationship.

• Difference is that each person has learned how to meet own needs, rather than project on to partner.

• Individuals are fine whether in relationship or not.

• Both are then free and happy to facilitate meeting each other’s needs.
Self-sufficient Relationships

It takes a long time, lifetimes of experience, to arrive at the condition of self-sufficiency.

• Approximately 15% of relationships.

Religious and cultural conditionings promote dependence on external factors to feel secure.

• Evolution follows involution.
